

Luxury at Castle Zbiroh

Prague, Czech Republic
3 days / 2 nights

There are rumors of buried Nazi treasures in the ancient well of the Castle Zbiroh outside Prague. During the war, Castle Zbiroh was a top-secret Nazi radio listening post. The story claims that Nazi treasure was dropped into the well in the last days of the Third Reich as Allied troops closed in from East and West. "We know from witnesses that a Nazi aircraft landed at the nearby airport a few days before they left, that large cases were unloaded and taken to the castle," the current owner, Jaroslav Pacha, explained. When the Nazis left they took nothing with them, not even their uniforms. Recently an exploration team discovered ancient weapons and Nazi documents at 200 feet. As they continue careful exploration, who knows what they may find?

Castle Zbiroh is first mentioned in 1195 then progressed through a series of wealthy or noble owners until after WWII when it was abandoned and declared off limits by the Communist regime. Finally, just in the last few years, it was purchased by the private firm Gastro Zofin, which restored this historic castle turning it into a deluxe conference center and hotel.
